Iran busts US spy networks

Plot to oust Khomeini: CIA in trouble

NICOSIA, April 21, (Agencies): Iran's Parliament speaker said today that several US spy networks plotting to overthrow Ayatollah Khomeini's fundamentalist government have been uncovered, including cells in the Navy's upper echelons, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency reported. The agency, monitored in Nicosia, said Hashemi Rafsanjani announced during a sermon at the weekly Friday prayer session at the Tehran University that a large number of the alleged spies have been arrested in recent weeks.

He said they included "big American spies," who were now being interrogated, and that the arrests had exposed the whole Central Intelligence Agency in the Middle East.

Dominion over Shatt not negotiable: Iraq

BAGHDAD, April 21, (Agencies): Iraq's ruling Baath Party newspaper said today that Baghdad would not compromise on sovereignty over the Shatt Al Arab waterway, a key issue in peace talks with Iran

"The Shatt Al Arab river has been an Iraqi river throughout history and will remain so," said an editorial in Al Thawra.

The government daily Al Jumhuriya warned Iran not to violate the ceasefire. "We sincerely call on (fran) to turn this round of talks into serious and fruitful (negotiations)," it said.

In Geneva, Aziz, in response to a reporter's question, swiftly dismissed sharpened demands by Iran for a full withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Iranian territory as its precondition for progress.

"The Iranian side should know it has no right to dictate, to set the priorities at the talks," Aziz said.

"The peace talks have to address the whole peace plan with all its provisions and all its obligations," Aziz said.

An investigating magistrate in Venice issued summonses on Wednesday to 15 people working for French and Italian companies as part of a probe of alleged arms sales to Iran and Iraq, officials said.

MANILA, April 21, (Agencies): Hooded gunmen killed a US military adviser and Vietnam war hero today as he was driving to work near Manila, US and Filipino officials said.

US embassy spokesman Jerry Huchel said Army Col. James N. Rowe, 51, of McAllen, Texas, chief of the Army division at the joint US military advisory group, was pronounced dead on arrival at a Philippine military hospital, and his body was flown to Clark Air Base, 80 kilometres (50 miles) north of Manila.

Rowe's Filipino chauffeur, Josquin Vinuya, was wounded in the shoothing but was reported

WASHINGTON, April 21, (AP): The judge in Oliver North's Iran-Contra trial told jurors preparing to begin deliberations today that no one, including the President, has authority to order anyone to violate the law.

North has said he had authority from superiors including, he believed, President Reagan, for many of his actions in the secret sale of weapons to Iran and aiding Nicaraguan rebels at a time when official US aid was hanned.

US district judge Gerhard Gesell told them "your job is to decide the facts" in the first trial stemming from the mid-1980s affair in which profits from arms during his eight years in office. The judge was specific in his instruction about North's contention that he acted under orders from top White House officials and, he assumed, with Reagan's approval.

"Neither the President nor any of the defendant's superiors had the legal authority to order anyone to violate the law," Gesell said.

Britain to deploy 'stand-off' nukes

LONDON, April 21, (AP): Britain proposes to take the lead among NATO nations in deploying new air-launched shortrange nuclear weapons, the Independent newspaper reported yesterday. The newspaper quoted unnamed officials in Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's government as saying it also was hoped that aircraft based in West Germany and perhaps Italy would be equipped with the so-called "stand-off" nuclear weapons. The paper said that under the British proposals, new F1-11 and F15E bombers, equipped with US-made stand-off missiles, would be based at the Upper Heyford air base in Central England and the Lakenheath air base in eastern England.

The report said additional missiles also would be fitted to Tornado jet fighters at other British Royal Air Force (RAF)

"With these moves Britain is making clear its determination to maintain NATO's policy of nuclear deterrence if the planned modernisation of short-range weapons in Western Europe proves politically impossible, they reported.

They said the British proposals would deflect pressure on the Bonn government to update 88 ageing short-range US Lance missile launchers stationed in West Germany. West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl had previously agreed Bush weighing options

No decision on M

WASHINGTON, April 21, (AP): US President Bush told a group of congressional leaders Wednesday that he hasn't decided on future development of the MX nuclear missile, the legislators said. said Sen. John Warner. "Hedid not in any way strike a note of finality." The missile question is part of an effort to build new weapons for the land-based leg of the US nuclear arsenal. Bush's options are to base new 10-warhead MX missiles on rail cars, a system favoured by Air Force enerals, or develop a new single-warhead missile known as the Midgetman, to be housed on trucks. The Midgetman is far more costly, with a price tag of nearly $24 billion for 500 single-warhead missiles, compared to $5.4 billion for the same capability on the multi-warhead MX, according to Air Force

Withdrawal of article 'raises questions' on fusion

SALT LAKE CITY, April 21, (Agencies): University of Utah researchers trying to perfect their claimed nuclear fusion-in-a-flask breakthrough withdrew an article from a leading scientific journal because they did not have time to revise the paper, university officials said.

The decision by researchers Stanley Pons and Martin Fleischmann appeared to raise questions about their experiments, which have been partially reproduced by several major US universities as well as influential scientists in Italy and the Soviet Union.

But Pam Fogle, a University of Utah spokeswoman, said yesterday, "the information (that the journal Nature) wanted amounted to an increase of about 1,000 to 2,000 words in the article. And some of the data asked for would have had to come from experiments currently under way." The article was submitted to the British journal at the time Pons and Fleischmann announced March 23 they had created a nuclear fusion reaction in a simple electrolytic cell at room temperature.

45 killed in severe halistorm

BEIJING, April 21, (UPI): At least 45 people were killed and 119 injured early Thursday in a severe hailstorm that swept through an area of Sichuan province in southern China, the Xinhua news

The storm was centred in the south of the province, around the city of Luzhou, provincial officials told Xinhua. It began around 12:30 am and dumped hail on the city and its suburban districts for half an hour. Officials said at least 45 people were reported killed and 119 injured, but that the casualty toll could rise because the storm disrupted communications in some areas.

Driver dies in train crash

POOLE, England, April 21, (AP): An engineer died yesterday when the locomotive he was driving crashed into the rear of a freight train, British Rail officials said.

The locomotive engineer was alone; a driver and guard in the freight train were not injured in the crash outside this south coastal city, said a spokeswoman, speaking anonymously in keeping with British custom.

Hailstorms in Bangladesh

DHAKA, April 21, (Reuter): A storm dumped giant hailstones over northeastern Bangladesh on Wednesday night, killing at least three people, destroying crops and flattening bamboo

Officials said the little rain it brought failed to ease the drought

Three people were killed and 100 were injured, some hit by hailstones weighing about two pounds (one kg), when 60 mile per hour (90 kph) winds swept the tea-growing district of Sythet and the neighbouring area of Sunamganj, the officials said yesterday.

'Tracks sabotaged'

Train crash toll now 70

NEW DELHI, April 21, (UPI): Sabotaged tracks may have caused a speeding express train to derail in central Uttar Pradesh, killing at least 70 pas-sengers and leaving injured some 260 occupants inside 12 crowded compartments, a cabinet minister said on Wednesday. Three relief trains rolled into the capital early Wednesday bearing more than 500 survivors of the Tuesday disaster along a remote stretch of track near Lelitpur, 280 miles (450 km) south of New Delhi.

Survivors gave graphic accounts of the crash, which they said left the locomotive and eight lead compartments undamaged; but hurled 12 carriages off the tracks, scattering baggage and bodies across a dried-up riverbed and farmland.

Officials reported three more bodies had been recovered from the wreckage, bringing the death toll to 70, but would not estimate how many other corpses may still be snared inside the remains of the train that had been heading to Delhi from southern Kar-

Kuwait anticipating a return to prosperity

Special survey by British magazine

LONDON, April 21, (KUNA): Kuwait is anticipating a return to prosperity after a period of recession and slower growth, according to an important report published here today.

The cessation of the war between Iran and Iraq has brought a new mood of confidence to the Arab country, the specialised publication, Middle East Econ-omic Digest (MEED), said in a special survey on Kuwait.

In a large section entitled: "Kuwait 89, Building for the Future", the main Middle East business weekly here emphasised that since the nationalisation of its own oil reserves, the third largest in the world, in 1976, Kuwait has sought to exploit this vital resource in a way that will ensure maximum growth over the long term while preserving stability in world oil markets.

Development MEED described Kuwait as "a leader in the development of downstream facilities" which has expanded its petrochemical and refining operations to the point where it is now "one of the region's leaders in the export of petroleum products, as well as crude oil."

It indicated that today the Arab Gulf country controls its own hydrocarbons industry from production through transportation and marketing.

After the formation of the state-owned Kuwait Petroleum Corporation in 1980, Kuwait also began expanding its oil interests abroad. Outlining the areas of expansion, the weekly said that since then Kuwait has acquired oil field leases in the US, the Gulf. Mexico, the North Sea and South China Sea, refining and retailing networks in the UK, the rest of Europe and Scandinavia. The GCC country is also exploration and production projects in Africa, Asia and Europe as well as in other parts of the Middle East. This policy allowed Kuwait to achieve both "vertical and horizontal integration of its oil industry and enabled it to withstand the sharp fluctuations that have occurred in the world-wide price of crude oil during the MEED quoted Kuwait Oil Minister and Chairman of KPC, Sheikh Ali Khalifah Al Sabah as saying that he expects world oil prices this year to rise close to the OPEC target of $18 a barrel, following the organisation's agreement in November to reduce its combined output.

This could push Kuwait's oil export earnings up this year to around $5.5 billion compared with an estimated $4.5 billion in 1987 and 1988, and help the country achieve its goal of balancing its budget while still preserving its comprehensive social services and support for private sector trade and industry, the weekly noted. The publication which is widely read by business and financial experts in Europe underscored that the Kuwaitis are justifiably proud of the way in which they have used their oil revenues to expand their investments abroad.

Income from these foreign assets now forms a substantial portion of the country's earnings and helps to explain why Kuwait has been able to maintain a surplus on its balance of payments current account, even when oil prices have fallen sharply.

In this wide-ranging report MEED looked at the implica-tions of the end of hostilities in the Gulf war on Kuwait, asserting that the country is looking forward to playing a major role in the reconstruction of both Iran and Iraq.

Referring to the diplomatic efforts to improve relations with both countries, it said that they have resulted in closer ties between Kuwait and both neigh-

On the agreement by the Iraqi government to provide substantial supplies of water and electricity to Kuwait, the magazine said that the move is expected to greatly increase Kuwait's agricultural and industrial potential.

Kuwait's capital is also being welcomed in Iraq, which is expected to provide an important new market for the export of Kuwait goods and services.

MEED also turned its attention to the major plan to build a new large town at Subiya, near r with Iran, to accommodate Kuwait's growing population.

The project has excited interest as the new town is expected eventually to house some 100,000 residents and will be connected to the capital via a 30kilometre causeway, the longest in the Middle East.

The scheme could lead to some $13 billion in investment over the next two decades, the weekly added.

In its survey the magazine also highlighted that Kuwait's Infor-mation Minister Sheikh Jaber Mubarak Al Hamad Al Sabah has introduced an "innovative new policy aimed at enhancing the country's profile abroad." The ministry has set up a special department to deal with the international media following the establishment of a ceasefire in the Gulf war last August, it went on.

MEED pointed out that since then the ministry has played host to scores of foreign journalists eager to see Kuwait with their own eyes and ears."

This new policy of openness to the international media was particularly evident during the country's National Day celebrations in February, when journalists from the Soviet Union, India, East and West Europe and the United States were able to take part in a series of press conferences and tours organised by the

The publication said that Sheikh Jaber told journalists that this new policy "reflects his belief that an open dialogue will benefit not only Kuwait, but also help to encourage its relations with the international community and further international co-operation in general."

Investment

In another article, MEED carried an interview with the Managing Director of the Kuwait Investment Authority (KIA). Fahad Mohamed Al Rashed, in which he explains his organisation's policy on foreign investments in Europe, the US and Asia.

He also outlined some of the new initiatives KIA is taking in China and other developing countries.

in the future, he explained, KIA will be seeking to use more Kuwaitis to help manage its investments abroad. During the interview, the KIA managing director also shed light on the broad aspects of Kuwait's investment policy. Meanwhile, the weekly published also remarks given to it by Kuwait's Minister of Finance Jassim Mohamed Al Khorafi.

In a wide-ranging interview with MEED in this special section the finance minister discussed the ways in which his ministry hopes to preserve the benefits the Kuwaitis enjoy, particularly in social services, health and educa-

I HAVE two small chikiren one of whom was recently born in Kawait. What is the vaccination programme for pre-school children and is inoculation administered abroad valid in Kuwait? Y.M.,

NEWLY born babies are given oral polio drops. At the age of three, four and five months a child is inoculated with a triple or DPT (diphteria, tetanus and whooping cough) vaccine, and polio drops. which are also administered at the age of six months. When a child is one year old it is vaccinated against measles. Booster doses of DPT vaccine and oral polio drops are repeated at ages one and a half, three and a half and school going age. Please note that vaccination is compulsory. If parents don't bring their children for vaccination they will be contacted by social workers. Children who began their innoculation programme outside Kuwait can continue the programme in the country provided they have a written record of previously received vaccines.

I AM an expatriate holding a valid driving licence from my country. Can I get a Kuwaiti driving licence without a test? A.S. Abbasiya

IT depends on your nationality. Europeans, Americans, Canadians and Australians holding a licence from their countries automatically qualify for a Kuwaiti driving licence. The GCC citizens can use the licence issued in their own countries. Other Arab and Asian nationals can apply for Kuwaiti driving licence only if they work as lawyers, doctors, engineers, teachers or journalists. Those who do not fall into any of these categories but have a valid driving licence from their countries can take a test. But there is a hitch there too. Only those drawing a salary of KD 600 in the private sector and of KD 450 in the government sector need apply.

I AM a newcomer to Euwait and although I find the markets full of clothes they are either two common or too dear. Could you tell me where I can buy good quality clothes at reasonable prices!

Lorna Khan,

YOUR best bet would be to shop around in Salmiya, Kuwait City or even the air-conditioned souqs. If you are one of those who are not happy seeing the dress you are wearing on someone else then the best thing to do is to buy cloth which is in plentiful supply and find yourself a good tailor. In this way you should be able to get a good quality dress for about KD 12.

Modern technology being used for better produce

MODERN technology and advanced production methods have played a big part in improving agricultural production in the world and particularly in the Arabian Gulf region.

In order to highlight the most important modern agricultural methods applied in Kuwait, a local daily interviewed the director of the Agricultural Wealth Department at the Public Authority for Agricultural Affairs and Fish Resources, Egnineer Jasem Habib Al Bader who stressed that one of the most important modern agricultural methods implemented is production with the implantation of vegetable tissues and genetic engineering.

Bader said that the merging of both these methods at one time makes it possible to obtain "the giant plant."

Salcido to face murder charges in California

MEXICO CITY, April 21, (AP): A US winery worker who admitted killing seven people including his wife and two of his daughters, was swiftly deported to the United States by Mexican authorities yesterday to face murder charges in northern California, US government sources said.

Ramon Salcido, who had been sought since the slayings last week in California, was arrested early Wednesday near his hometown of Los Mochis, in the western state of Sinaloa.

Salcido was brought to Mexico City yesterday afternoon and quickly put onto a jet for a flight to California, according to a US embassy source and a US government source in San Francisco. The sources spoke on condition of anonymity and refused to give details.

I want to be tried in an American court and face an American jury," Salcido said as he arrived in Mexico City, according to the US television network

Salcido claimed to be an American citizen, according to Mexican authorities. Even though US authorities said they had no record that he had been naturalized. If Salcido had been treated as a Mexican citizen, lengthy extradition proceedings might have been necessary.

Mexican authorities had assured the United States they will act as quickly as possible. The sources refused to say how Salcido was flown out.

Salcido, dressed in a blue shirt and casual slacks, arrived in Mexico City on a commercial flight and was led through a cordon of agents to waiting cars and whisked away.

Salcido was shackled to another, unidentified prisoner at the very rear of the Mexicana Airlines plane that brought him in from Mazatlan, said George Ramirez, a field producer with local television station Kron-TV in San Francisco, who was on the

"He was very tense. He was always moving his head around, looking," Ramirez said. Ramirez said he had a brief conversation in English with Salcido. When asked if he had anything to say to his surviving 2-year-old daughter, who he tried to kill, Salcido said, "No," Ramirez said. When asked it he had any regrets, Salcido also said

When asked about his motive, Salcido replied, "I'll do all my explaining to US authorities."
Salcido, 28, admitted to the slayings on Wednesday night in a TV interview and said he made his way back to Mexico to see his parents for the last time. He refused to discuss his motives.

Federal officials said he had told agents he killed his American-born wife, Angela Richards, and a winery co-worker, Tracy Toovery, and five other people in a jealous rage when he came to believe Toovey and his wife were romantically involved.

The only survivor of the rampage, his 2-year-old daughter Carmina, is recovering from a slashed throat.

Professor denies

'Fossil history of India faked'

(AP): An internationally renowned Indian scholar faked the fossil history of India and the Himalayas in "one of the biggest paleontological frauds of all time," an Australian scientist said yesterday. But Indian Prof. Viswa Jit Gupta denied the accusations made against him and threatened to soe Australian John Talent, whose accusation he called "baseless, mischievous, personal and hissed."

Talent, an associate professor in Earth Sciences at Sydney's Macquarie University, told the Associated Press that Gupta, a geologist at the Punjah University in Chandigarh, invented fictitious fossils and had rewritten the geological history of northern Talent said Gupta had based his writings on specimens "that could be bought in fossil shops, and were often picked up in the United States, parts of Europe, China and elsewhere."

Talent's findings were to be blished yesterday in respected British journal Nature and later in the week in the US Magazine Science.

"It is a case of professional jealousy," the 46-year-old Gupta said in India, looking pale and his voice sometimes choking and "I am planning to launch legal proceedings against Talent," Gupta told an AP reporter. Gupta's legal adviser, S. R. Bansal, was at his side. "Difference of opinion among scientists is nothing new, but in this case it has taken a personal shape. I am shocked at all this,' said Gupta.

Talent, who provided the AP with copies of his Nature journal paper, said Gupta had published about 400 scientific papers and several major texts on the geology

US sets moratorium; probe begins

WASHINGTON, April 21. (UPI): The powerful explosion that tore through a gun turret of the battleship USS Iowa and killed 47 sailors occurred the instant the captain ordered the gun crew to, "commence firing," a Navy officer dislcosed yesterday.

As the remains of dead were flown home, the Navy launched an investigation into the worst US naval accident in 20 years and ordered a moratorium on the firing of similar 16-inch (400 mm) guns on any of the four battleships in active naval service.

A military honours ceremony at Delaware's Dover Air Force base, led by Navy Secretary William Ball, greeted the flagdraped coffins containing the remains of the men, who are believed to have died instantly in the blast. President Bush did not attend the Dover ceremony but told reporters at the White House that he intends to "find out in infinite detail" what happened aboard the battleship and ensure that "safey is at its highest level." Bush will travel to Norfolk, Virginia, on Monday to pay respect to the relatives of the sailors killed.

The 45-year-old Iowa was firing its huge 16-inch (400 mm) guns during routine gunnery practice about 200 miles (320 km) northeast of Puerto Rico Wednesday when an explosion and fire ripped through fun turret No. 2 on the front of the "Forty-seven crewmen are dead. Between 10 and 12 have suffered minor injuries. Most of these were in the firefighting party. There are not serious injuries," Pentagon spokesman Fred Hoffman said.

Only the 11 crewmen who were in the lowest level of the turret escaped, the Navy said.
The Iowa, one of four World

War II battleships modernised and recommissioned by the Reagan administration in the 1980s, was taking part in the Atlantic fleet training exercise "Fleetex 3-89" with 28 other ships at the time.

The Iowa dropped anchor about 15 miles (24 km) off the Roosevelt Roads naval air station in Puerto Rico to allow the remains of the 47 dead to be transported to the base by helicopter and then flown to Dover. Navy officials were trying to

The oceans are warming faster than thought

LOS ANGELES. April 21. (UPI): The oceans are warming and rising about twice as rapidly as believed, suggesting that global warming caused by the burning of fossil fuels has already begun, the Los Angeles Times reported yesterday.

Satellite data indicates that the temperature of the earth's oceans has been rising at a yearly rate of nearly 0.2 degrees Fahrenheit (0.1C) through most of the 1980s, the Times said in a report based on findings to be published in yesterday's journal Nature.

We may be just beginning to witness the onset of warming. produced by the accumulation of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere, known as the greenhouse effect, said oceanographer Alan E. Strong of the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration in Suitland,

Combined with recently reported data that five of the hottest years in recorded history have occurred during the 1980s — perhaps as a result of the greenhouse effect — the new report offers evidence that the planet may already have entered a period of unprecedented heat. The report -- coupled with findings announced on Wednes-day by Richard Peltier of the University of Toronto that the level of the oceans is rising about one-twelfth of an inch (2.1 mm) per year — seem to add new urgency to predictions of wide-spread coastal flooding. Monitoring ocean tem-peratures has been particularly difficult in the past because little data has been available to cover the vastness of the oceans.

But with the new satellite measurements, which can provide as many as three million observations per month, researchers are more assured of the accuracy of their findings.
Strong told the Times he has discovered an upward trend in temperatures of about 0.18 degrees Fahrenheit (0.1C) per year, about twice the rate of increase that had been measured before the use of the satellite Measurements of changes in the ocean level are also quite difficult, Peltier said.

Support Jordan

HAD Jordan been a state advocating terrorism, murder of dignitaries, destruction of vital installations, or had Jordan been demanding everything in victory, giving nothing in the event of loosing, had King Hussein been a terrorist such as Marcos or Abu Nidal or their likes, the whole world would have rushed to its help to pacify its internal front.

The Jordanian people have had the right to express themselves through demonstrations. Indeed, there is an economic crisis in Jordan — like it happens in other countries. Perhaps the economic crisis in other countries was even more severe than in Jordan. For example the incidents in Sudan and Algeria and some other Arab countries, where such incidents were banned and news buried.

What must be remembered is that the departure of a government in Jordan and the formation of a new one will not solve the problem. It must also be remembered that Jordan's needs to overcome the economic crisis are unlike the demands of the US or Soviet budgets.

Jordan's needs are simple and the problem of its people can be solved. We as Arabs should not forget that Jordan is on the frontline with Israel. Jordan has been greatly responsive to any Arab nationalist call — for example its support for Iraq during its war with Iran, its attitude towards security issues in most Arab countries where Jordan never failed to send its military experts to offer assistance.

Thus, we should have rushed to Jordan's support particularly when the amounts needed were not too large to shake the budgets. Our support should have extended to the moral aspect also.

For certain reasons, Jordan is passing through an economic

This transfer from one stage to another. This stage may not take a long time. It only requires care and help from the Arab world — who one day found Jordan a stubborn frontline state, a state of active diplomacy, the country of Arab solidarity that never said no to Arab consensus.

Jordan has never tried to influence any internal front in any Arab country. It also never interfered in any country's internal affairs. But, at the same time, Jordan provides advise to Arab leaders free of cost.

We must now rush to help and support Jordan, before it is too late and before we are compelled to admit that we delayed in extending our help.

US standing idle in Afghanistan

By Christopher Hanson

WASHINGTON, (Reuter): Two months after Soviet troops withdrew from Afghanistan under pressure from US-backed majuhedeen, critics say America no longer has a coherent and effective policy for promoting the rebel cause.

The resistance is beset with difficulties, both military and political, and the Soviet-backed government in Kabul is putting up a more effective fight for survival than was expected.

Congressional critics and private analysts say Washington is doing little more than standing idly by.

"It seems to me our policy is watching and waiting and hoping for the best. Surely we can exert more influence than we are?" said Gordon Humphrey, a Republican senator who is one of the most ardent resistance-supporters in the American Congress, at a recent Senate

Others say Washington is providing the wrong weapons and failing to press the mujahedeen to form a representative government — partly because Afghanistan is no longer a priority.

"What's the aim?" asked Robert Neumann, former US envoy to Kabul. "It was to get the Russians out. That accomplished, what government Afghanistan has is a lesser objective." The Kabul government, which Washington says is illegitimate, has clung to power longer than many had predicted it could without Soviet soldiers to prop it up. The last Soviet troops left on Feb 15.

Resistance forces ringing the strategic city of Jalalabad have found it difficult to adjust from guerrilla fighting to conventional siege tactics. Hampered by poor co-ordination between rival factions, plagued by bombings and minefields, they have been bogged down for some six

Some Western diplomats say the mujahedeen cannot win a military victory and a negotiated settlement may now have to be sought. The State Department rejects that view, believing the fall of the Kabul government is inevitable. But independent Afghanistan-watchers feel the administration of President George Bush is not doing enough to help the rebels win.

Punjabi Sikhs see themselves as an endangered species

Khalistan: an expression of Sikh fear

By Susanne Rudolph

FRAME 1: It is the height of the harvest season in Punjab, the most productive agricultural state in India, heartland of the green revolution that has made India self-sufficient in food. Thousands of purbeas seasonal labourers from the east of India, stream in by bus and train to harvest the crop. A group of young men in turbans enters the labourers' camp and begins shooting with automatic rifles. In the wake of death and destruction, thousands of purbeas fee home in terror.

Frame 2: Four young men enter the brilliantly coloured tent that has been erected for a wedding reception in a small town in Punjab. They inspect the tables laden with food. There are no signs of wine or liquor. No cigarettes. A vegetarian menu. They are satisfied. The bride's father breaths a sigh of relief as the uninvited guests depart.

The young men are Sikhs, the religious community that dominates Punjab. They are part of the small but insistent fraction of Sikhs who believe their religion can find proper expression only in a separate state, Khalistan. Since 1980, the secessionists have emerged as one of those intense extremist movements, like those intense extremist movements, like the IRA, that subvert the energies of a large sovereign state while violently dis-rupting the lives of their own community. The Sikhs are fighting for a separate state in which it would be possible to control the impurities and corrupt accretions that they see as the consequence of assimilation to Hindrism on the one hand and to sensate modern culture on the other. Their uninvited attendance at the wedding is an attempt to enforce puritanical norms on those Sikhs whose observances are more casual. The shooting of the purbeas is meant to demonstrate that agriculture-as-usual has to reckon with the more urgent goal of religious self-realization, and to drive out competing labour.

The visit to the wedding suggests the issue is not so much one of an oppressed. minority seeking religious tolerance as of devout believers who see tolerance itself as a threat to religion.

Tolerance allows wrong practices.
Religion must have a setting in which people of true faith not only support one another but in which right religious practices are enforced by community opinion. It must be sheltered against an ion. It must be sheltered against an environment in which the faithful are tempted, for purposes of getting along, to difute their observances.

Khalistan is a political objective, but it is also the expression of Sikh fear of assimilation by the infinitely larger Hindu community. Even if the great majority of Sikhs seem indifferent to Khalistan and have a more casual attitude toward observance, they are nevertheless touched by the appeal that cherished norms and life-ways are endangered.

When they are not touched, they are frightened by the swift-moving and remorseless young men on motor scooters who punish the moderates and conciliators in their own community as often as they kill the Hindus they want to chase out of Punjab. All this occurs in a state where, even before the present conflict, carrying weapons was common and the murder rate was one of the highest in Sikhism is a devotional religion, akin to other faiths that became prominent in India after the 16th century. It is egalitarian, and critical of the inequalities and ritualism of classical Brahmanic Hinduism.

It had and has a pacifistic variant that emphasizes the inwardness of the relationship to God, the Sikhism of Guru Nanak. It has a militant expression, prominent since the 17th century, that conceives of Sikhism as a martial com-munity prepared to defend itself, the Sik-hism of Guru Gobind Singh. It has cheri-shed traditions of martyrdom that recall the death of Sikh gurus in conflict with the Moghul empire.

Sikh traditions of martyrdom lend themselves to comparison with Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's attack on the Golden Temple, the Sikhs' holiest shrine, in 1984. To the government of India, it seemed that it was ousting terrorists who were using a holy shrine to shelter their weapons and cadres. For many Sikhs, it was a fearsome violation of sacred space.

For some, Sant Bhrindenwale, the leader of Sikh extremists who died in that attack, is only the latest martyr in the story of Sikh suppression. So are the 3,000 or more Sikhs who died in Delhi in retaliatory massacres after Indira Gan-dhi was slain in 1984 by her Sikh bodyguards. Those who perpetrated the Delhi massacres have never been prosecuted, and some of the accused serve in highest public office. The Congress party of Indira and Rajiv Gandhi is both agent of the Punjab crisis and its victim. Many in India believed that if Indira Gandhi in 1980. had been willing to share power in Pun-jab with the moderate Sikhs of the Akali Dal Party, forming a coalition govern-ment of the sort that had ruled peacefully between 1977 and 1980, the present situation would not have arisen.

Instead, Indira Gandhi and former President Zail Singh, then leader of the Congress party in Punjab, excluded the Akali Dal from power. To do so, they used the fundamentalist wing of the Sikhs to help build a Congress party victory in Pubjab. They played the religious card successfully. But it returned to haunt them. The fundamentalist collaborators of 1980, strengthened by that collaboration, became the terrorists

Why have Punjabi Sikhs come to see themselves not only as an endangered species on religious grounds, but as downwardly mobile community? A smarting issue has been the reduction of Sikhs in the armed forces. Under the British rai, Sikhs were considered a martisi race, good fighters, and were favoured in Army recruitment.

They constituted 17 to 20 per cent of the armed forces, greater than their 2 per cent proportion of the population. The new policy smarts because Sikha thought of themselves as patriotic defenders of India. They believed they had earned much credit in the 1965 and 1971 wars with Pakistan. The reduction in numbers looked like a deliberate attempt to cut down to size what had been an honored minority. It also deprived young rural Sikhs of a valued career opportunity.

The Sikh issue has become seriously entangled in the conflict with Pakistan. Sikhs cross the border to worship in West Punjab, the portion of the state that went to Pakistan at partition in 1947. Pakistan is believed by ludin to provide weapons to the border crossers, to encourage or close its eyes to the drug traffic that finances the soccasionists, and to fuel the fires of Sikh terror. The Indian government has been heatant to build major industries in an area so vulnerable to attack by the most likely opposent in war. To Sikha, this lack of investment looks like a deliberate attempt to keep Punjab an agricultural state.

Today, the Punjabriate government to suspended; and the state is governed by president's rule, a constitutional device by which the federal government can take over a state when law and order fail. The opposition says the takeover was unnecessary, and ended the last opportunities to rebuild a civil politics in the Punjab. The killings continue, monotopously.

Speaker Jim Wright down, but not out ... yet

Violations technical not ethical, say Democrats

By Steven Komarow

WASHINGTON, (AP): Public airing of the ethics committee report on House speaker Jim Wright provides his opponents with reams of political ammunition, but does not in itself strike a fatal blow.

Democrats must move to quickly mould public opinion if the speaker is going to keep his leadership post, and Wright's allies say having the facts on the table can help.

The committee on standards of official conduct on Monday released a voluminous report by its special counsel and charged Wright with 69 instances of violating House rules. The report provides sometimes embarrassing details of the financial benefits he received from friendships with two Fort Worth business-men. Wright is the ruler of the opposition Democratic party majority in

One, Carlos Moore, gave Wright unusually high royalties when he published the speaker's book, "reflections of a public man." With fiftyfive cents of every dollar going to Wright, the committee said it appeared that the speaker was using bulk sales of the paperback to evade House limits on outside income from speeches.

The second friend, George Mallick, had a business partnership with the speaker. Wright and his wife, Betty, benefited from the free use of a condominium and a car, and an $18,000 annual salary to Mrs Wright. House members are looking at the committee report on two political levels: within the institution and in their home districts.

Within the House, release of the report caused members to begin focusing on their own situations.

"We have to deal with it on a very specific level," said Martin Frost, a Texas Democrat and Wright ally who contends lawmakers will make independent judgments despite pressure at home. "I think members don't want to be stampeded on this, one way or another."

Confronted

Frost said members confronted with the committee's findings will find them troubling because of their broad implications. For example, it decided that Mallick had an interest in legislation using a standard so broad that anyone with wealth would fall in the same category, he contended, a situation that could snare many lawmakers. "I think members will look at this in a serious way and say. "Is this fair?"' he said. Outside of the House, Democrats must persude the public that the violations Wright is accused of are mostly technical and not really unethical. They can't afford to wait for the committee to render a verdict on whether Wright should be found guilty and punished. The initial rush of publicity was seen by virtually everyone as negative for Wright, but Democratic leaders argued that as they rebut the specific charges the public will come to believe that Wright is being held to an unjust standard. Rep. Beryl Anthony of Arkansas, chairman of the Democratic congressional campaign committee, said that "once people clearly understand... then you get an entirely different feel and reaction."

unsupportable political liability.

With few exceptions, Republicans greeted the release with sounds of deference and respect to the process set to investigate a fellow member. Despite the fact that the campaign to investigate Wright's finances was kicked off by one of their own, Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, the Republicans tried to portray themselves as above the fray.

A key element in their strategy to wrest control of the House away from the Democrats is to portray the Democrats as the party of

"If the speaker is well received in the country, and what he says is resonant with the American public, he improves his chances," said Rep.

Further, the report itself is not a conviction. That could only be done by the full House and even if that were to occur, it would be up to the Democrats who elected him to decide whether Wright has become an corruption and themselves as its enemy. The best politics for Republicans is no evidence of politics at all." said Rep. Jerry Lewis of California, chairman of the House Republican

Some Democrats scoffed at the Republican tactic.

Wright himself must also be convincing.

John Spratt, a Democrat from South Carolina.

It was "bipartisan, non-partisan garbage," said Rep. James Traficant, Democrat of Ohio. "Let there be no mistake, today in Washington, D.C. the party lines are being drawn in indelible ink. The verdict on Wright from the ethics committee may be technical and not so clear as the party lines. But when that comes, some weeks down the road, the public verdict may have already come in.

Sigh of relief as referendum is called off in South Korea presidential election before they were A government official declined to

By Daniel Schneider

TOKYO: South Korean President Roh Tae Woo's surprise decision to call off a referendum on his rule has won support from most of his political opponents.

"It is a victory for our people who hope for democratic progress amid stability, said the Party for Peace and Democracy led by anti-government stalwart Kim Dae Jung. The President's announcement on Monday is a "very universal loud sigh of relief" from the opposition, says a Western diplomat in Seoul.

President Roh and his opponents are concerned that a public campaign at this time would only further political confrontation and polarization in South Korea. Only forces on the extremes of the political spectrum, they say, would benefit from such a clash. The left had welcomed the referendum as an opportunity to press its campaign to overthrow the Roh government. The right argued that a victory would streng-then the President's hand against both the parliamentary opposition and the

The government appeared headed for a non-binding mid-April referendum. The outcome of that vote was far from predictable. Some polls showed a Roh victory, reflecting in part concerns about stability fuelled by labour unrest and radical student violence.

But there remain powerful lingering doubts as well. These centre on Roh's ties to the previous, unpopular, authoritarian regime of fellow ex-general Chun Doo Hwan.

The Chun regime is under investigation by the National Assembly and by the government prosecutors for corruption and abuse of power. The opposition has demanded Chun's appearance before investigating committees of the Assembly, where the opposition holds a majority of the seats.

Referendum Korean press reports speculate that the decision to indefinitely postpone the referendum was based on a back-room deal struck between the government and the opposition over the handling of the Chun issue and further democratic reforms.

comment on those reports, but pointed to the President's statement that "the issue of liquidating the negative legacies of the past era will wound up through the exercise of political wisdom on the part of both the government party and the opposition. The referendum issue has been a political hot potato since Roh suggested it. In the heat of the presidential election battle in December 1987, Roh promised an "interim appraisal" of his rule by the public. The pledge was intended to reas-sure voters of Roh's commitment to democracy and help him overcome the negative image of being Chun's handpicked successor.

Since the election, the opposition has held the pledge over Roh's head as a constant threat, using it as a lever to press the government on other issues. But while publicly calling on the government to honour its promise, the opposition's own enthusiasm for such a test of popularity has been less than overwhelming.

An anti-Roh vote, opposition strategists calculated, might trigger a new prepared to fight it. A victory would strengthen the government. Among the opposition party leaders, only Kim Young Sam has continued to press for the mid-term assessment to take place. Korean political analysts say Kim's main motive was competition with rival Kim Dae Jung for the status of being the leading opponent of the gover-

Kim Dae Jung, on the other hand, has been trying to shed his extremist image and to establish his credentials as a centrist. Kim Dae Jung, according to sources close to him, was also worried that the turmoil surrounding a referendum would only provide an opportunity for extreme rightwing elements, backed by the military, to make a bid to restore their

Ironically, the referendum had already turned into more of a tool for the right than for the opposition.

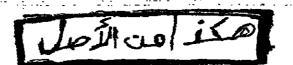

With poli results indicating a good chance of a Roh victory, members of the ruling party argued that this was a time to regain absolute authority.

Rightwing pressure on the President was evident in the days before his decision. A prominent rightist. Kim Yong Kap, a former Army major, resigned last week from his cabinet post calling for a crackdown on the left. "Only a strong government is able to achieve democratic reforms and likewise able to kick leftists out of our society," he told reporters last Friday. The President referred to such voices in his nationally televised speech. "Not a few have maintained that the authority of the President and the administration would be strengthened by winning a vote of confidence through a national referendum, even though this would entail some commotion," Roh said. But he saut he decided to put national interests ahead of partisan concerns. Analysts here generally agree that for most of the political forces in South Korea, the risks of the referendum outweighed its possible benefits.

The voice of caution prevailed," the Western diplomat commented, "and they all agreed this was something they'd just rather do without." The Christian Science Monitor.

Low-risk Cairo turns to gas

Kuwait firm Egypt widens hunt for crude

Egypt, burdened by a huge foreign debt and a rapidly-growing population, is encouraging oil exploration by offering foreign firms a rare commodity in the tumultuous Middle East-political stability and low risk. It is also trying to develop its huge gas reserves to ease rising domestic demand for oil and thus free more for export.

Oil exports provide the Arab world's most populous country with its main source of hard currency but Egypt's income was slashed when world oil prices tumbled in mid-1986.

In 1984, Egypt earned $2.6 billion from oil exports. Two years later, oil income was only $697 million before picking up in 1987 to $1.5 billion as prices recovered.

But Egypt does boast relative political stability.

Since coming to office in 1981, Mubarak has helped Egypt back into the mainstream of Arab diplomacy and played the role of peace-broker in the Arab-Israeli conflict.

Initially ostracised by most Arab states for the peace treaty it signed with Israel 10 years ago, Egypt is making fresh efforts to attract investments by Gulf Arab and Western firms.

Egypt has proven gas reserves of 10 trillion (10,000 billion) cubic feet, an Oil Ministry official said. In 1988, it produced 5.4 million tonnes of natural gas, an increase of 1.4 million tonnes

In 1989, natural gas production is expected to shoot up by 15 per cent, the official said, adding that some factories were switching to gas as an alternative to other energy sources.

In the northern Nile Delta, he said, the Italian Oil Company signed an agreement in February with the government to double gas production to 1.4 billion cubic feet a year.

He said the government inves-ted $164 million last year in Egypt's largest gas field, Abu Madi in the Nile Delta.

OPEC may boost output

OPEC states are likely to increase output to benefit from a surge in world oil prices and prevent a price explosion as a result of a shutdown in a major British North Sea oilfield, Gulf based oil industry sources said yesterday.

The sources said the impact of an explosion at an oil platform at Cormorant offshore field and the resulting loss of around 472,000 barrels a day of supplies was still being assessed by nervous traders and some OPEC states.

"The longer the halt in production, the more tempting it becomes for OPEC to step in and compensate for previous losses," one highly-placed Gulf Arab official told United Press International in an interview.

Gulf Arab producers opened their taps in the summer of 1987 over fears prices could reach over $22 a barrel because of supply disruptions due to Iranian and Irani raids against neutral oil tankers in the Gulf waters as part

OPEC states — Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the UAE and Qatar — are scheduled to hold policy coordination talks in the Saudi capital of Riyadh on April 26 to discuss production and pricing options for the organisation during the second half of the year. Goods in New York, the spot May crude oil futures contract expired yesterday at a three-year high of $24.65 a barrel, after posting a record one-day rise of $2.04.

But the frenzied trading in New York did not portend an imminent shortage of oil. Rather, the advance, which set a contract high of $25.30 one hour before the close, was largely based on expectations concerning an unmentionable phrase in futures trading "squeeze."

A squeeze develops when those who have sold a commodity short have trouble producing the goods when the contract expires. To fulfil their contractual obligations, the short sellers must often pay dearly to buy out of their con-tracts, which was what happened yesterday.

The possibility of a squeeze became quite apparent earlier in the week, though market participants refused to use the word.

"I don't know what a squeeze is," said one trader at the New York Mercantile Exchange (NYMEX). "Let me just say that the number of shorts kept growing as crude prices in recent days, and when we opened this morning there was an unusually large number of outstanding contracts in the expiring delivery. And many of the open contracts were short sales. Unbelievable."

Defence budget will go down again fifth real reduction in a row for

BRUSSELS, April 21, (Reuter): President Bush will announce a $10 billion cut in the US military budget next week despite a promise to keep the Pentagon in step with inflation, Defence Secretary Dick Chency said on Mednesday.

Chency, attending a NATO meeting in Brussels, said Bush had agreed with US congressional leaders to chop $10 billion from the 1990 defence budget proposed by former President Ronald Reagan before he left office in January.

He told reporters that would be a 0.9 per cent real reduction from current levels although Bush earlier planned to cut only 56.3 billion from the $315.2 billion Reagan proposal.

We (the Defence Department) probably did better this year by the compromise up front" rather than getting into a long baltle with Congress later in the year, Chency said.

UK stocks remain depressed as money rates rise LONDON, April 21, (Reuter): Equities remained depressed in this turnover at mid-morning against the background of another rise in sterling money market rates.

"Everyone is very jittery in case the Bank (of England) decides to bite the bullet and signal a rise in base rates today," said one trader. The three-month sterling interbank rate, seen as a guide to the level of base rates, moved up to 13-9/ 16 7/16 pct, compared with current 13 pct base

By 1000 GMT the FTSE 100 stood 11.6 points lower at 2,052.8 after its 22.6 point plunge yesterdat. At the same time only 191 million leading shares had changed hands.

London Gold

LONDON, APRIL 21, REUTER - GOLD BULLION PRICES WERE STEADY THIS MORNING IN QUIET DEALINGS FOLLOWING OVERNIGHT FIRMNESS IN

GOLD WAS FIXED AT 385.25 DLRS AN OUNCE, AGAINST AN OPENING 384.90/385.40 AND THURSDAY'S CLOSE OF 382.80/383.30. DEALERS SAID CONDITIONS WERE ROUTINE WITH THE MARKET LACKING THE INCLINATION TO EXTEND EARLY GAINS. STRENGTH IN CRUDE OIL, NOW AROUND ITS HIGHEST SINCE EARLY 1986, WAS SUPPORTIVE. BUT PRICES FAILED TO MOVE HIGHER AS IT SEEMS INFLATIONARY PRESSURE WILL BE SWIFTLY MET BY MONETARY AUTHORITIES WORLDWIDE IN THE FORM OF HIGHER INTEREST RATES.

London Money Market

LONDON, APRIL 21, REUTER - MONEY MARKET INTEREST RATES WERE AROUND 1/16 TO 1/8 POINT FIRMER AGAINST THURSDAY'S CLOSING LEVELS AMID SPECULATION THE BANK OF ENGLAND MIGHT RAISE BASE

FOLLOWING YESTERDAY'S 1/2 POINT RISE IN THE WEST GERMAN BUNDESBANK DISCOUNT AND LOMBARD RATES, BRITISH MONEY RATES HAVE RISEN SIGNIFICANTLY IN ANTICIPATION THAT BASE RATES HERE MIGHT HAVE TO RISE TO DEFEND STERLING, SHOULD IT FALL TOO FAR. HOWEVER, THE CURRENCY HAS REMAINED REASONABLY STABLE THIS MORNING AFTER REPORTED INTERVENTION BY THE BANK OF ENGLAND TO SUPPORT STERLING BY SELLING DOLLARS, DEALERS SAID.

Wall Street Market Report

NEW YORK, April 21, (Reuter): A surprise interest rate increase by the West German central bank helped to derail a recent Wall Street advance. But late buying allowed blue chips to recoup some losses, leading to a mildly lower close. Further rises in oil prices also pressured stocks.

The Dow Jones industrial average closed down 10 to 2,377. Blue chips had closed at two consecutive post-crash highs earlier this week. Decliners led galners by four to

"There was some futures buying and bargain hunting (at the end)," said Jack Baker, Shearson Lehman head of block trading. "But we showed relatively good strength."

TOKYO STOCKS END DOWN, REGAIN NOST OF EARLY LOSSES TOKYO, APRIL 21, REUTER - SHARE PRICES FINISHED LOWER, BUT MANAGED TO REGAIN MOST OF THEIR EARLY SHARP LOSSES. TODAY FOLLOWED THE RECENT PATTERN OF INDIVIDUALS TAKING THE LEAD AND INSTITUTIONS SITTING ON THE SIDELINES. TRADE WAS SLOW BEFORE THE WEEKEND AND ON INTEREST RATE AND POLITICAL WORRIES. THE KEY 225-SHARE NIKKEI INDEX LOST 155.34 POINTS, OR 0.47

PCT, TO CLOSE AT 33,029.81. THE NIKKEI PLUNGED 404_63 POINTS IN EARLY TRADE AFTER THURSDAY'S RISES IN WEST GERMANY'S DISCOUNT AND LOMBARD RATES, COUPLED WITH FURTHER INCREASES IN OIL PRICES, HEIGHTENED CONCERN THAT JAPAN MAY BE FORCED TO RAISE ITS DISCOUNT RATE. INDEX-LINKED BUYING FOR INVESTMENT TRUST PUNDS SET UP

RECENTLY HELPED BOOST PRICES FROM THEIR LOWS, BROKERS SAID. FEARS OF A DISCOUNT RATE HERE WERE A FACTOR THURSDAY, WHEN THE NIKKEI CLOSED DOWN 178.68 POINTS AFTER FALLING MORE THAN 300 AT ONE POINT. AS THURSDAY'S DROP AND OTHER RECENT MEAKNESS HAD ALREADY PARTLY DISCOUNTED THE POSSIBILITY OF A RATE RISE, TODAY'S LOSSES WERE LIMITED, BROKERS SAID.

THE NIKKEI WAS DOWN 120.63 POINTS, 0.36 PCT, IN THE WEEK. FALLS LED RISES BY ALMOST SEVEN TO FIVE WITH 527 ISSUES LONER, 385 HIGHER AND 166 UNCHANGED. TURNOVER WAS A LIGHT 900 MLN SHARES, UNCHANGED FROM THURSDAY.

THE BROADER FIRST SECTION INDEX, OR TOPIX, LOST 9.23 TO 2,438.19 AFTER SLIPPING 13.11 POINTS ON THURSDAY. U.S. SPOT CRUDE OIL PRICES ROSE MORE THAN THO DLRS A BARREL FOR MAY DELIVERY IN NEW YORK ON THURSDAY, BUT THE SHARP RISE WAS DUE TO THE EXPIRATION OF THE MAY FUTURES CONTRACT. THE JUNE CONTRACT ROSE ABOUT 75 CENTS A BARREL OVER THE DAY IN

NEW YORK. JAPAN IMPORTS ALMOST ALL ITS OIL. "A FOCAL POINT IS THE CONSUMER PRICE INDEX ON THE 28TH, THE FIRST REAL INDICATOR OF THE EFFECT OF THE CONSUMPTION TAX ON DOMESTIC PRICES, SAID TOSHIYOKI NISHIGUCHI, HEAD OF THE

Saudi riyal deposits generally steady

NICOSIA, April 21, (Reuter): Saudi riyal interbank deposits were steady in the fixed periods yesterday but short-dated funds firmed as operators covered positions ahead of the Gulf riday weekend.

Dealers said rising oil prices were fuelling anticipation of lower rival interest rates in the months to come.

Some arbitrage deals were reported as offshore banks borrowed rivals to swap into dollars on the forward market, but business focussed on day-to-day funds.

Quotes for the spot-next rose to 10, 9-3/4 per cent from eight, 7-1/2 on Wednesday, then slipped to 9-1/2, 3/8. It initially dealt at 10 per cent but was later welloffered at 9-1/2. One-week rose to 9-7/8, 5/8 from 9-5/8, 1/8.

The one-month maturity was little changed at 9-13/16, 11/16 per cent, with deals reported at

Steady

Three and six-months were both steady at 10, 9-7/8 and 10-1/8, 10 respectively. One-year deposits were also unchanged at 10-5/16, 1/8 per cent. The spot riyal firmed to 3.7504/08 to the dollar from quotes of 3.7513/16 but this mainly reflected a split value date ahead of the weekend. Meanwhile Kuwaiti dinar deposit rates were mixed in quiet trade on Thursday, with overnight climbing due to a drain on funds from the market, dealers said. Overnight was taken at 10-3/4

8-3.4 and spot-next and one week quoted at 9-3/4 8-3/4. On Wednesday, ali had been quoted at a uniform 10 nine. Dealers said most activity was in overnight, with an outflow of ing some banks to go to the Central Bank to take advantage of repurchase facilities. They said part of the outflow may have been connected to Wednesday's 40 million dinar

($140 million) issue of 91-day treasury bills. Monthly salary payments due to begin entering the system on Saturday are likely to relieve some of the pressure, they added. One and two months were bid

1/4 point higher from Wednes-day at 9-1/4 8-3/4 per cent, while three months to one-year were little changed at a uniform 9-1/8 8-5/8, but dealers reported no trade.

West Germany raises interest rates

FRANKFURT, April 21, (Reuter): West Germany's central bank raised two key interest rates yesterday in an attack on rising inflation that took financial markets

After an unusually long six-hour meeting of its policy-making council, the Bundesbank announced it was pushing up its discount rate from four to 4.5 per cent

Its Lombard rate, the rate at which it lends money to banks for money market operations, was also increased from six to Austria and the Netherlands quickly followed suit and Denmark also raised a key rate.

The Austrian National Bank said it would raise its Lombard and discount rates by half a percentage point to 6.5 and five per cent respectively from today. The Dutch Central Bank said it would raise three leading interest rates by the same amount.

Denmark's central bank said it would raise current account interest rate, by 0.5 percentage points to nine per cent, effective next Monday.

Investment

The dollar nose-dived on the news of higher interest rates as money seeking higher investment returns flowed into West Germany. A higher mark tends to make West German goods less competitive abroad and to cut its foreign sales.

Economists linked the Bundesbank's move to inflationary fears made worse by surging oil prices after an explosion at a North Sea platform sharply cut back British oil production.

"Higher oil prices have got the Bundes-bank worried," said Commerzbank econ-omist Juergen Pfister. "Inflation looks likely to reach three per cent and that is not good for the Bundesbank."

But a senior Bundesbank official, board member Claus Koehler, said the move was not determined by any single factor. The price climate has worsened," he told Reuters. The Bundesbank, in a brief statement accompanying the central bank's announ-cement, said: "The move reflected the fact that monetary growth currently remains stronger than can be tolerated from the point of view of monetary stability." West Germany's money supply is still expanding outside the target for growth set for this year, despite signs of a recent slowdown. High monetary growth often sets the seeds for future inflation as too much money chases too few goods.

West German consumer prices rose 2.7 per cent in the year to March. Annual inflation was running at just over 1.5 per cent at the end of 1988.

But officials from both the Bundesbank and the federal government have said the rise reflects higher taxs on consumer goods which were introduced at the start of the cultural literacy BONN, West Germany, April 21, (AP): New banknotes to be issued next year aim to teach West German spenders something about their cultural legacy. But by omitting the most famous of German figures, the bills may offer more a game of trivial pursuit than a lesson in history.

As with many endeavours by Germans to embrace their complicated past, there is more to be cleaned from who's left out of the colourful new money issue than in the figures chosen to be hou-oured. The eight new banknotes to be printed and issued beginning in the fall of 1990 will feature artists and scientists who have made important contributions to society, from the Nobel laureate who developed a cure for syphilis to the wife of composer Robert

Japan has no plan to raise interest rates: Murayama

TOKYO, April 21, (UPI): Fin-ance Minister Tatsuo Murayama said today Japan has no immediate plan to follow West Germany and other European countries in raising the official interest rates because commodity prices still remain stable.

Murayama told a news conference the government was not worried about the present level of the Japanese yen in relation to the dollar and other currencies.

Murayama was commenting on the West German Central Bank's decision yesterday to raise its key discount and Lombard interest rates by 0.5 points to 4.5 and 6.5 per cent, respectively.

The Netherlands, Denmark and Austria followed suit.

"It is not necessary for Japan to consider raising the official discount rate at present. We are not concerned over the yen's current level," Murayama said. The yen climbed against the US dollar and other currencies in early trading in Tokyo. It opened 131.35 per dollar, up 0.93 yen over yesterday's close.

Murayama, however, stressed the need for the government to pay close attention to commodity prices which will affect the government's policy of sustaining economic expansion.

The Bank of Japan reported this week that the nation's wholesale prices, which will be reflected in consumer prices a few months later, rose 0.2 per cent in March, marking the fourth consecutive monthly increase.

A survey by the nationally-circulated daily Asahi Shimbun showed today prices of imported goods, particularly those from newly industrialising economics in Asia, have been on the steady increase in recent months.

The paper said electronic equipment manufacturers in South Korea and Taiwan have informed Japanese importers that they would raise prices of their shipments, including audiovisual products, by 3-5 per cent mainly because of rising domestic prices and the appreciation of their currencies against the yen.

Sharp increase in GCC cement output

RIYADH, April 21, (OPECNA): Member states of the Gulf Co-operation Council (GCC), excluding Kuwait, made remarkable progress in cement production in 1987, says a report. Total GCC production increased from 15.10 million tons in 1986 to 1640 million tons in 1997, the many by the Princip 1986 to 16.40 million tons in 1987, the report by the Riyadh-based GCC socretariat issued this week said. Saudi Arabia alone accounted for 62.8 per cent of all GCC cement production, while the United Arab Emirates produced 24.1 per cent, followed by Qutar (5.4 per cent) and Oman (5.1 per cent). Bahrain has no cement plants. Saudi Arabian cement production increased from 9.20 million tons in 1986 to 10.20 million in 1987, while that of the

Taiwan cuts import tariff on 378 items

TAIPEI, Taiwan, April 21, (AP): The cabinet approved import tariff cuts yesterday on 378 items, trying to case concerns over inflation and to open Taiwan's market to more foreign products, the government information office said.

The reductions, becoming effective on May I, covered electric home appliances, consumer products, construction and industrial materials, the agency said in a news release.

The package also included 86 of the 267 items requested by the United States, it said.

The statement said the government will lose about 2.66 billion Taiwan dollars ($98.51 million) in annual tax revenue as a Among the curs approved, tariffs for dryers will be reduced from 15 per cent to 10 per cent, those for microwave ovens from 15 per cent to 12.5 per cent, and those for aluminium bars from 17.5 per cent to 12.5 per cent.

Currency devalued for third time in April LIMA, Peru, April 21, (AP): The Central Bank devalued Peru's currency 4.2 per cent yesterday, the third devaluation this month and sixth this year of the inflation-ravaged inti.

The official-rate inti, used to pay exporters and to import basic foods and medicines, was devalued from 1.570 to the US dollar to 1,640, according to a communique.

The Central Bank described the devaluation as a small medicine to ensure the smooth functioning of the exchange.

modification to ensure the smooth functioning of the exchangerate system.

The devaluations this year, which have reduced the value of local currency a total of 70 per cent, have been simed at boosting exports and reducing the amount the government spends to subsidize imports.

Foreign copyright piracy $1.3b a year WASHINGTON, April 21, (AP): A coalition of recording, film, book and computer groups said Wednesday it is adding China, Saudi Arabia and India to the ranks of "problem" nations contributing to an estimated $1.3 billion in piracy of US copyrighted works each year.

The three countries are among 12 nations that have either failed to provide "adequate and effective" protection for US copyrighted works or have limited market access for such works with unfair trade barriers, the International Intellectual Property alliance said.

The alliance contended that the total of piracy and market access loss is costing the US industry about $1.4 billion annually. The group said it was imperative that US President George Bush's administration continue efforts begun in 1984 when Congress amended trade laws to allow sanctions against piracy and trade barriers.

India hopes for deal with some striking dockers

BOMBAY, India, April 21, (Reuter): The Indian govern-ment said today it had high hopes of reaching a pay agreement with at least two of five docks workers' unions whose strike has virtually paralysed the country's 10 main ports.

A Surface Transport Ministry spokesman in New Delhi said talks with the two unions went into the early hours this morning and would resume later in the day.

"We are very optimistic they will reach some conclusion," he

The spokesman said a third union might join the talks. The three represent up to 60 per cent of the 300,000 port workers who went on strike last Monday over pay. However, rail unions whose workers move the bulk of goods to and from Indian ports, announced support for the dockers and said they would consider strike action.

Support

"We congratulate them and we support them," All-India Railwaymen's Federation general-secretary J.P. Chaubey told

"We are meeting in (the cen-tral city of) Hyderabad on April 23 and 24 when we will decide what kind of action to take," he

Chaubey, whose union represents 900,000 workers, said the railwaymen had their own problems with the government over a delayed wage settlement and strike action would be discussed at the Hyderabad meet-

The government moved in Navy contingents backed by soldiers and paramilitary troops to move essential commodities such as oil into the country. Only in Calcutta, where the Marxist West Bengal state government supports the dockers strike, was there a problem in bringing oil ashore. Only six days supply was in stock there.

The Surface Transport Ministry spokesman also said one major port. New Mangalore in the southern state of Karnataka, had re-opened with about half its 550 workers reporting for duty

The Indian government declared the dockers strike illegal and gave port authorities the power to hire outside workers to shift cargo in an effort to undermine the stoppage.

The dockers leader said they would set up pickets outside the port gates and try to prevent new workers entering, setting the scene for possibly violent confrontations. Industry and trade sources in Bombay, India's commercial hub and biggest port, said they were happy with the govern-ment's tough action against the

But they said worries were increasing rapidly that industry would be starved of raw materials and exports damaged in the long-term if the strike did not end soon.

The opposition refuses to allow the budget's passage until its demands on the scandal are met, leaving Takeshita with the choice of either using the ruling party's parliamentary majority to ram it through or preparing a supplementary budget to tide the country over until the stalemate is broken.

The opposition wants former Premier Yasuhiro Nakasone to testify in parliament about his alleged connections with the scandal, involving massive payments by the Recruit publishing and telecommunications group to politicians and others.

Nakasone refuses, leaving Takeshita with the budget dilemma. But there are dangers in the two paths open to him.

Risks If he pushes the budget through, political analysts say he risks precipitating a general election which in the present scandalcoloured circumstances could be disastrous for the ruling Liberal Democratic Party (LDP).

If he decides not to force the issue and the stalemate drags on. parliamentary business will remain suspended, public works spending will dwindle and the list of pending political and economic issues will grow.

Takeshita has said he wants the budget to get through the Lower house by April 28 so it can pass the upper house by May 28, the last day of the current parliament session.

"Takeshita's diplomatic schedule will be also affected if he fails to push the budget through by April 28," said an official of Komeito, the second largest opposition party after the Japan Socialist Party.

Snow Goose, a dance drama based on a story by Paul Gallico, portrays a tender bond forged between a cripple, a young fishergirl and a sky princess — the Snow Goose. When the bond is shattered, it becomes a memory of love and beauty. The musical score was conceived by Spike Milligan. Fire and Ice, elemental opposites and eternally incompatible are irresistibly drawn towards each other by a fatal fascination, which leads to anger, hatred and destruction. The dancers portray the essence of flame and crystal.

In addition to Fire and Ice and Snow Goose, the company has performed Christmas Symposium (1974); The Four Seasons: Les Patineurs (1975); The Enigma Variations (1976);

Rolling again for satisfaction

By George Gordon

ON the fringe of a volcanic mountain where the rich green foliage clogs the meandering footways, five middleaged men are trying to recreate the magic of their youth.

Their self-imposed deadline is a mere five weeks away and around the world an entire industry is awaiting a £80 million golden jackpot from their efforts. It is an extraordinary exercise but the five are all members of the Rolling Stones and even the most cynical analysts admit that with them anything is possible.

On Happy Mountain the hatchet has been buried in the longstanding feud between Mick Jag-ger and Keith Richards, two Stones who haven't rolled in harmony for nearly three years.

Wives and children have been flown in Mick Jagger's Jerry Hall spends the long hot days playing with their two children in the warm waters of the Caribbean. Patti Hansen, the model wife of Richards, takes their two children to the pool in the local hotel. Ron Wood and his wife Jo Howard and their children have taken a mountainside villa. There are barbecues, Sunday brunches and a strange air of suburban socialising among the once-wild men of rock as they painstakingly put together the album they hope will eclipse Michael Jackson's Thriller as the biggest selling record of all

When the album is complete they will be in the countdown to a world tour and it is the combination of the two that is vital for a blockbuster success. Getting the personal chemistry right is as essential as getting the music right.

Bill Wyman, the 52-year-old bass player, said: "We have all gone our separate ways and tried solo albums with varying degrees of success. We have come to realise that we have to work together to recreate that magical, mystical something that is the hallmark of the Stones."

They last tried three years ago with an album called Dirty Work. It sold, but not in the sort of mind-bending numbers that electrify the voracious record business.

There was no follow-up tour and the Stones rolled apart again, sparking further rumours of antagonism between Jagger and Richards and predictions that the group would never recapture the mysterious 'It' that makes musical millions.

Jagger, Richards, Wyman, Wood and Watts hunger for one more stunning Jagger, Richards, Wyman, Wood and Charlie Watts — millionaires many times over -each hunger for one more stunning Wyman, who can look back to the days success that will create another generation of struggling for success in obscure London pubs, said: "It really wasn't that bad. of Stones worshippers. The dream is for just one smash hit single tune that will add We are like family. We have disagreements. We drift and, like family another dimension to the Stones musical library of success. members, we come back together from For Jagger the hunger is acute. The time to time. We talk about our kids, their success of Satisfaction has never been surschools, old friends. It is a bond that is as passed by him and that is more than 20strong as any blood tie. Mick and Keith are is the clash of two enormous egos. But out of it comes the music." To get it right the Stones have hired the Air studio here, owned by George Martin, the legendary producer for the Beatles. Elton John, Stevie Wonder, Sting and Paul McCartney have walked the steep winding path to the white-painted building and emerged with music that is loved by creative, dominant personalities and there millions. For the past four months Jagger and Richards have met in Barbados to hammer out 25 different numbers that will eventually come down to 15 for the album. They record them all and then vote. The decision is nearly always unanimous and arrangements for the tour when an army of nearly 200 will drive and fly around the world.

In the music industry, putting together an album in five weeks is regarded as a staggering target. Nine months or a year is normal. The bearded Dunn revealed: "We are still setting up. In serious terms the clock hasn't started running yet."

The tranquility and remoteness of Montserrat are large pars of its appeal to the superstars of music. The easy going natives are long used to the eccentric habits of their visitors.

Taxi driver John Ryner turned up at the tiny airstrip to pick up Paul McCarmey. The former Beatle took over his battered station wagon and kept it for 10 weeks. He then paid Mr Ryner the price of a brand

The studio lights burned until almost 3 am. Bats, fireflies and huge moths swirled through the floodlight beams and in the sound-proof chamber Jagger and his Stones wound up another hard night's

Madonna hits No. 1 on US charts

YORK, Madonna took over the top of the pop singles record charts in the United States with her latest hit Like A Prayer. The disc hopped up from third place a week ago. She Drives Me Crazy by the Fine Young Cannibals slipped from number one to second spot on the Cash Box magazine chart. Bon Jovi's I'll Be There For You soared from seventh to third.

Last week's number two hit, The Look by Roxette, dipped to fourth.

Soaring fast up the top 10 list was Funky Cold Medina by Tone-Loc, up from 12th to 5th. The week's only other newcomer to the list was Second Chance by 38 Special up from 15th to 10th.

Tell It Like It Is took Billy Joe Royal to the number one spot on the Cash Box magazine country-and-western singles chart. Shenan-doah's The Church on Cumberland Road was second, and Don't Toss Us Away by Patty Loveless was third.

What do you bid now? A.—Since partner's jump rebid shows a hand worth some 18 points, a raise to four clubs, which might be passed, is a distinct underbid. # Shepherd risks it all in Chances Are

By Ivor Davis

FOR an actress who supposedly protests her privacy with a passion, the public has been given plenty to chew on when it comes to the life and times of Cybill Shepherd.

The timest tidbit about her turbulent career and astonishing off-screen antics has been devoured with the kind of frenzy usually reserved for the likes of Elizabeth Taylor and Priscilla Presicy.

At times Shepherd's dalliances in Hollywood have proved more exciting than her adventures as Maddy Hayes in ABC's ailing four-year-old series Moonlighting. Consider her off-the-wall marriages and romances. high-profile pregnancy resulting in the birth of twins, rumours of marital rifts, divorce. Now it is time for the emergence of a new Shepherd — the single working mother who is starring in a new feature film. For a good cause — namely blowing the trumpet about her new big-screen fantasy/romance/comedy Chances Are, co-starring Robert Downey Jr., Ryan O'Neal and Mary Stuart Masterson — Shepherd has been making herself available to the press.

It is her first feature film in six years, although she has done such TV movies as Seduced (1985) and the miniseries The Long Hot Summer (1985) opposite Don John Johnson. But with Chances Are she is hoping to emulate her Moonlighting co-star Bruce Willis phenomenal screen success in Die Hard (1988), a film that brought him $6 million and made more than $150 million.

Willis promoted his film heavily, chatting casually with the press in a relaxed no-holdsbarred manner. Before Shepherd utters a word, however, the ground rules are handed down not once but twice to questioning repor-ters. Please, no questions about marriage or Divorce, of course, is imminent after mon-ths of rumours. Bruce Oppenheim, the father of Shepherd's much-photographed 16month-old twins - Molly Ariel and Cyrus Zachariah Shepherd-Oppenheim — has moved out of the couple's ranch home in the suburbs of Los Angeles. Shepherd has filed for divorce on those catchall California grounds irreconcilable differences.

The tabloids speculate wildly about tug of war custody battles over the twins and a published story reported that Shepherd has been having an affair with a TV director. Both accusations are termed garbage by Shepherd's publicist Cheryl Kagen.

In Chances Are Shepherd plays the wid-owed mother of a 22-year-old daughter. Her husband was killed shortly after their marriage more than two decades ago and suddenly the folks running heaven agree to send him back to Earth in the body of a 21year-old actor (Downey). They rather carelessly fail to erase his memory and when he bumps into Shepherd it is like old times. Only this time he falk for both mother and daughter. It is obviously a comedy, but Shepherd has to play it straight.

"The movie is important to my career," says Shepherd. "I was risky but exciting creatively. I play Corinne Jeffries at 21 and again in her early 40s. She is a woman who experiences the devastation of losing her husband and is a mom with a grown-up daughter. All those things — except being 21, which I have no interest in being again — were new to me. I don't think it would have worked without my character playing it straight. I want people to see the film, laugh and come out with a great feeling."

On the Moonlighting front things don't look good. In February ABC-TV yanked the series from its regular spot because of low ratings. Everyone connected with the show, however, insists that it will be on again in April because they are still shooting episodes and production has not stopped.

Still, the ex-model-turned-actress concedes that viewers were turned off by her long pregnancy-related absences and the farfet-ched story lines that attempted to plug the gaps caused by her time away.
Says Shepherd: "If 'Moonlighting' was her ride to the top. She and Willis are now earning an estimated $200,000 per episode in what industry insiders say is one of the costliest shows in TV history.

"I know it is a fabulous job and has given me the break of my lifetime," she says. "But it has gotten so hard, particularly being the mother of three small children (Shepherd also has a 9-year-old daughter Clementine from a previous marriage). I have the twins at work with me, but it is still hard. "I always told myself that as long as they want me for Moonlighting I'm stupid not to do it," she continues. "I'm committed for six years, Bruce for five - maybe he is smarter than I. This year we're doing wonderful things and I'm enjoying working with Bruce more this year than ever before. Still, it is a mixed blessing. If you talk to anyone who has played the lead in an hour-long series they'll tell you it wears you down. There has been a lot of stress, which I've coped with by pumping iron. I have a gym at the studio and one at home. When I got through with the twins' pregnancy my abdominal skin was such that I could have folded it up and stuck it in my pants. I had to go back to work in six weeks so I needed to take drastic action."

Shepherd still pumps iron, does daily aerobics and is meticulous about her diet. She is also preparing for the future should Moonlighting bite the dust. She is anxious to star in Larry McMurtry's Texasville, the sequel to the The Last Picture Show, the 1971 Peter Bogdanovich film that launched her acting career as well as her eight-year relationship with the director. Bogdanovich will direct the new movie if he can get the money to bankroll

She still does L'Oreal hair-product commercials but is no longer doing ads for the US Beef Council.

Schoolboy's Twiggy ordeal

A TEENAGE actor's mother whispered into movie star Twiggy's ear: "Be gentle with him ... he's terrified of kissing you."

And when 17-year-old school boy Navin

Chowdhry came to the big moment in the movie, Madame Sousatzka, Twiggy eased the nervous boy into his first love scene with a relaxing joke, followed by a gentle, lingering meeting of their lips.

It all went off beautifully ... just like Navin's mother Simran had hoped. And Twiggy said approvingly: "I thought he handled it beautifully. If his nerves had got the better of him, the scene could have ended up looking

"I knew Navin would be terribly shy because of his age. He was such a sweet thing. His mother, bless her, came to me on the morning we were shooting the kissing scene to explain how shy her son was. So I was very gentle with him. And so was the director, John Schlesinger."

Navin, who has never been in a move before, told me: "I got on great with the other stars — Shirley MacLaine and Shabana Azmi. But it was different with Twiggy because I knew I was going to have to kiss her. "Because of that I was very shy and embarrassed at first, which made things difficult. But Twiggy was great and made me relax. As soon as she realised that we were coming up to that kiss, she cracked a joke, pretending that she didn't want to do it. "In the end, we went ahead matter-of-factly, just as though we were saying lines. And I'm great friends with her now."

Embarrassment But there was more embarrassment ahead for shy Navin, who was chosen to star in the film from hundreds of other Asian boys. He is Manek, a talented young pianist who falls in love with a beautiful, would-be-singer, played by Twiggy. Shirley MacLaine is Madame Sousatzka, Manek's piano teacher, and Indian star Shabana Azmi his mother. For, after facing up to his first screen kiss, Navin was horrified to learn that he would have to show his underpants. He explained: "In one scene, I have to pull my trousers up when my mother bursts into my bedroom. I wanted to wear boxer shorts rather than briefs. I'm really conscious about my body, and boxer shorts hide a bit more of me than

But the director said he wanted me in briefs because it added more to the scene, I was so shy that I kept pulling my trousers up before the camera had a chance to catch me. We had to do about nine takes before we got

And, although the script didn't have any more blushes in store for Navin, there was one more agonising task for him. Although he couldn't play a note, he had to learn to mime as though he were a brilliant pianist. "In the film I never actually play the piano. But it took about 300 hours of training to learn how to pretend to." The movie makers asked top concert pianist Youty Solomon, who teaches at London's Royal Academy of Music, to make young Navin look as though he could carn a standing ovation from any concert platform in the Navin, relaxed in jeans and a denim shirt in a suite at London's Savoy Hotel, told me: "It was very tough. Pd be up at seven in the morning to start filming, finish at ten at night, and then have to go to Youty's house for a few hours practice on the piano.

"I had to get everything right—the fingering, body movements and even facial expres-

"When I started, I couldn't play a note. But, when Yonty had finished with me, I was miming concertos by Brahms and Schumann as convincingly as any concert peanist." But there was a crisis when Navin sprained his wrist because of the intensity of his "music" lessons. He said: "I had just two days to get my wrist better. I had to massage lotion into it all the time. Even my mum, and sister Samantha, who is 18, were massaging my hand, willing it to get better. And luckily it

Mother Simran added: "It was such a joy when Navin landed the part because I knew how badly he wanted to be in that film. When John, the director, told Navin that he was good at acting but there was a problem because he had to play the piano, I saw the tears in Navin's eyes. But he is so dedicated, he put his heart into learning how to play the piano so that he could get the part."

So Navin, the boy from Bristol Grammar School, proved he was star material. And when he heard he had won the part, there were joyful family celebrations at their fourbedroomed semi-detached home in Stoke Bishop, near Bristol

Simran recalled: We were all very tense waiting for John to ring Navin. When the phone went, I heard an almighty scream. That's when I knew Navin had made it." So the boy from nowhere, who had never seen a movie camera before, was suddenly rubbing shoulders with stars. And they helped him to act like a true professional.

Navin told me: "Everybody gave me tips and encouragement. Shirley MacLaine would help by saying things like, "Why don't you try it like this?" We had great fun.

"Shirley even invited Shabana and I to her home in London so we could get to know each other really well. This was essential for the chemistry there is between us in the film. We all rehearsed our lines in front of each other and then had a good laugh about it. This helped to relax everybody."

Brink Today Navin seems to be on the brink of stardom. But he is still level-headed enough to stay on at school until he has finished his

The experts believe that, box-office-wise, Navm can be rated on the curry scale as vindaloo. He told me how it all began. Father Mohindar was on business in London when Navin Chowdhry, aged 17, came from nowhere to land a star part in the movie Madame Sousatzka, with Shirley MacLaine and Twiggy. But his mother had to help in Navin's very first love scene by telling Twiggy: 'Be gentle with him .. he's so he spotted an advertisement for an Asian boy to star in a movie opposite Shirley MacLaine. Mohindar believed his son would be tailormade for the part, and phoned home. Simran and Navin caught the next train to London. The following day they went to the auditions, although director John wasn't there at the time. Navin said: "As soon as I walked into the room where the casting directors were, I could tell they were interested in me. "They told John Schlesinger's driver, Take him to John's house straight away. I think he'd like to see Navin." Half-an-hour later, John had decided that he had found his perfect Manek. He told me: Tknew he was the only possible boy out of all the hundreds we had seen. There was no question about it. Navin was boyish and sensitive. "He was a natural. It had been difficult to find the right person and I was thrilled.

The only think I was terrified about was that I didn't have a back-up. No-one else was suitable. I knew that Navin's character would have to be rewritten if he became ill." But today Navin has never felt better. He said happily: "I began acting when I tagged along with my sister Samantha when she went to drama classes. But I never dreamed it would end like this. Even so, I want to be prepared in case my acting suddenly takes a massive drop. If that happens, I want to become a barrister.

"This film has been incredible. During rehearsals, I'd stop and think, "Christ, what's happening? I have Shirley MacLaine on my right, Shabana on my left, and Twiggy

But Navin admitted that, after a taste of stardom, he was looking forward to going home and seeing his friends. He told me: "No way do they look on me as a film star. We don't talk about it much and it hasn't really changed anything between us.

"I think the most important thing about all this is whether your friends like the film or not. Because that's the down-to-earth reality. When I go home, my friends want me to go with them and watch Madame Sousatzka at our local cinema. They want me to go and say, 'Hi' to the lady who sells popcorn, and give her a shock. But I don't think I will."

After all, schoolboy Navin - star or not is desperately shy with women.

Now comes a story dealing with a black British soldier who goes off to fight for his country, but finds on returning home that his countrymen are indifferent to his sacrifices For Queen And Country, which happens to be the title of the film. Director Martin Stellman, a 40-year-old Londoner with an eye for social injustice, cast American actor Denzel Washington in the role of the black Briton. "I saw 50 or 60 black British actors, but I wasn't quite convinced they could have pulled off the responsibility of carrying the movie. Also, in order to raise money for an English picture you have to be imaginative and inventive - and come to America. An American actor is more appealing to anyone investing in a picture — someone they had heard of anyhow.

"Then I saw Denzel in A Soldiers Story and I was so impres-

"Denzel worked really hard on his English accent for several months before production. He lived in the deep East End of London with a family of cockneys, both black and white. And he spent some time with the British marines to learn the rhythm of the language and the vocabulary."

Stellman made it clear that For Queen And Country is not a war picture per se. Its battle scenes are seen only under the opening

He says his film is much closer to Coming Home - which won Oscars for Jon Voight and Jane Fonda in 1978 — than Pi which won the Oscar for best picture in 1986. Essentially, the drama lies with the racial aspects of the lack paratrooper's return home and the rejection he finds among his friends and neighbours. Stellman says the film examines growing racial problems in English cities. "The issue of race in England is very complex," he said. "There were so many different ethnic groups in the British empire and millions of them emigrated to England in the 1950s and 1960s. "There are Indians, Pakistanis and people from Ghana, Nigeria, Trinidad, Jamaica, Guyana, Kenya, Sierra Leone, Bangladesh and the list goes on and on. All of them were minorities with separate cultures, which leads to clashes. "Most minorities are found in London, Manchester, Bristol, Glasgow and Birmingham, not in villages and small towns.

"The difference between the racial issue in Britain and the United States is that in England there is considerably less segregation. There is less paranoia, less violence.

"The issue in England is class, not so much colour. A lot of poor, working class people live it housing projects, and that's what our war hero returns to.

"Actually, it is the police that most visibly exercise discrimination against minorities in Britain. It is rather fashionable to be black in some areas of English society. "Racism in England is very subtle and always polite. There is a veneer of civility and decency, but underlying it is a racial notion involving the inbred conviction that the Anglo-Saxon is better than anyone else."

Kim, the real Rain Man

An island of genius, says screenwriter

By Hilary Israelsen

SALT LAKE CITY, (AP): When screenwriter Barry Morrow first met Kim, his original model for the central character in Rain Man, Kim already knew Morrow's past and present phone numbers and the number of freeway exits to his

They met in Texas where Kim and his father, Fran, were attending a 1984 meeting of the American Association of Retarded Citizens. Kim, 37, is an extremely rare prodigious savant, capable of recalling vir-tually anything his senses have ever told him. But while Kim has a seemingly unlimited ability to absorb and recall facts and figures, he has limited reasoning power and his IQ is a below-average 88. He always has lived with Fran with in the Salt Lake City area, accompanying him on frequent business trips since a 1981 divorce from Kim's mother.

"I am Rain Man," Kim said in an interview. "This is an important time for me. I have many talents now."

Morrow, who calls Kim "an island of genius," believes the movie has changed Kim.

"When I first met him, after he talked to me he dashed across the room and made low moaning sounds," Morrow said, "Now, he would walk into a room and offer you his hand."

Kim's father, who asked for privacy reasons that his and Kim's last name not be used, agrees that his son is changing. After a special screening of Rain Man or the Utah legislature, Kim stood up and stressed the importance of understanding the

Tom Cruise in Rain Man. needs of the handicapped. "I had no idea he could talk to those guys that way," Fran said. 'He is really learning to put his thoughts together."

After meeting father and son, Morrow decided he would pair a savant like Kim - trusting and sometimes childlike - with a greedy, self-centered and impatient brother.

Then I put them in a car and had them drive across the country together," said Morrow, nominated for an Oscar for his screenplay. It chronicles the relationship between Raymond Babbit, an autistic savant played by Dustin Hoffman, and his brother, Charlie, played by Tom Cruise. "I don't want to take away from the other people that helped Dustin create the character." Morrow said in Claremont. California. "But Kim was the first inspiration for the story." Kim has seen the movie three times, the first scated at the premier between Morrow and Fran. Kim stared at his hands and the floor during most of the movie. When Morrow asked him why, Kim told him he had seen it with his "heart." While there are behavioural similarities between Kim and Hoffman's film character, Kim is far more outgoing. Two years ago he spent an afternoon with Hoffman on a movie set, the actor mimicking his movements and his walk. When it was over, Kim recalls, Hoffman said, "I may be the star, but you are the heavens."

Daniel Christensen, medical director of the Western Institute of Neuropsychiatry at the University of Utah, has made a thorough study of Kim.

"He has a photographic memory, but no way to minimize stimuli," Christensen said. "He's the closest I've been to a human computer," unable to filter or forget information, or assign it relative importance. He can answer untold thousands of questions covering history, sports, maps, literature, mathematics and other subjects. "You'd expect someone with these mental skills to have something extra in his brain, but there's actually something missing," Christensen said. Brain scans show an absence of the bundle of nerve fibres — the corpus callosum --- that connects the two halves of the brain. "Kim is probably one in 10 million," he said. Morrow offers another insight. "Kim has been called a savant with some autistic characteristics, but the real answer is that, like all of us, Kim defies human labels." The screenwriter said Hoffman has received a flood of mail from people touched by the movie, people who know other rain men. Morrow takes little credit for the response.

Milan rout Real

Italian trio reach finals

MILAN, April 21, (Reuter): AC Milan ended an era and set up the prospect of a truly memorable European Cup soccer final against Steaua Bucharest when they crushed Real Madrid 5-0 on Wednesday night.

By thrashing the Spanish champions so convincingly for a 6-1 victory overall, they not only established themselves as arguably the most complete team in Europe but also ensured Madrid's impressive team would be torn apart and rebuilt.

Steams, the Romanian champions, secured their place in the Champions' Cup final with a I-1 draw in 12mir against Turkish champions Galatasaray to go through 5-I on aggregate.
On a night when Milan, inspired by their three brilliant Dutchmen Rund Gullit, Marco van Basten and Frank Rijkaard, were in unstoppable form, Italy was celebrating the rare achievement of supplying a team for each final of the three European club soccer-tournaments.

Sampdoria beat holders Mechelen to reach the Cup Winners' Cup final and Napoli drew 2-2 in West Germany against Bayern Munich to reach the UEFA Cup final.

But for Milan, the glory came at a cost — the possible loss of Gullit, who was carried off on a stretcher in the second half, from the final in Barcelona on May 24.

Gullit, who was in superb form on Wednesday when he scored once and played a big part in the excellent overall team performance, was said afterwards to have damaged cartilage in his right knee.
"Gullit played very well and we hope it is not too bad," said Milan coach Arrigo Saachi on Wednesday night. "He will be examined in Rome and we hope he will be all right for the final."

Saachi was delighted with his team's win — a victory taken well by Madrid who have delivered so many similar thrashings to others in the past — but warned not to be complacent. "It was a very beautiful performance and we took all our chances. But I thought we were lucky to be able to get in front so quickly after Madrid made a The whole occasion is one I will remember for a Steaua, European champions in 1986, had secured their passage to the final by beating Galatasaray 4-0 in Romania two weeks ago. They played well within themselves on Wednesday, quickening their tempo only after Cuneyt Tanman's 36th-minute goal for the Turkish side.

Ilie Dumitescu equalised three minutes later, and thereafter the match contained little to excite the 30,000 crowd.

Steama may have to go into the final without Dumitescu who was shown a yellow card, his second of the tournament.

Sampdoria reached the final of a major European competition for the first time with a supercharged finish which sent them hurtling past Mechelen of Belgium, who were seeking to retain the Cup Winners' Cup.

The Belgians led 2-1 from the first leg of the semifinal and maintained this advantage for most of the return in Genoa.

But Sampdoria then poured in three goals -Brazilian midfielder Tominho Cerezo after 70 minutes, striker Giuseppe Dossena after 85 defender Fausto Salsano with two minutes left-to sweep to a 4-2 aggregate win.

Sampdoria's opponents on May 10 in Berne, Switzerland, will be Barcelona, who reached the final of the competition for the fourth time with a 2-1 away win over Sredets Sofia for a 6-3 aggregate

IOC set to resume battle with FIFA

BARCELONA. April 21, (Reuter): A battle of wills between the world's two most powerful sports bodies could decide the fate of the 1992 Olympic soccer tournament next

The International Olympic Committee (IOC) wants to open the event to all professionals but the International Football Federation (FIFA) insists on an under-23 age limit.

Despite pressure from IOC president Juan Antonio Samaranch, FIFA has dug its heels in since its congress chan-ged the Olympic eligibility rules for soccer last July. Previously only European and South American World Cup players had been barred from the Olym-

The key to the power struggle is Samaranch's desire to open up the games to the best competitors in all sports. But FIFA is worried that such a step would make the Olympic tournament a rival to its own showpiece event, the World Cup finals.

Soccer sources said FIFA appeared to hold the whip hand and had already threatened to pull soccer out of the Barcelona Olympics if the IOC did not give way.

"In soccer-loving Spain the Olympics would be a damp squib without soccer. It is one of the biggest crowd-pullers in the Olympics," F1FA general secretary Sepp Blatter said recen-

The meeting is also expected to see the start of serious lobbying by the six candidates for the 1996 summer Olympics following the close of bids last weekend.

LONDON, April 21, (Reuter): Graeme Hick has been cleared to play for England in 1991 despite playing two first class matches for his native Zimbabwe in 1985-86. the Test and County Cricket Board (TCCB) said yesterday.

A statement from the TCCB registrations committee said Hick had not known at the time that the matches against Young Australia in October 1985 and New South Wales in March the following year were first class fixtures.

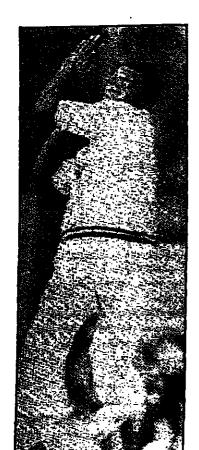

"As no new facts have come to light, Graeme Hick's seven-year period of qualification for England still dates from the second of April 1984," the statement

PORT-OF-SPAIN, April 21, (Reuter): Malcolm Marshall completed a match haul of 11 for 89 as West Indies wrapped the four-match series against India by winning the third Test by 217 runs yesterday.

Marshall picked up three of the four wickets to fall during the morning session of the final day after India, already one down in the series, had resumed at 161 for six facing the hopeless task of scoring another 270 to win.

Marshall, who wrecked India's first inings with a five for 34 return, sealed the touring team's fate when he broke the defiant seventh-wicket stand between skipper Dilip Vengsarkar and wicketkeeper Kiran More.

The pair had hauled India from 92 to 190 for six when Marshall made a ball cut back and trapped More leg before padding up. His plucky 42 off 107 balls included six fours. Marshall had Vengsarkar caught for 62, and bowled Chetan Sharma for seven.

Ian Bishop chipped in with the wicket of Arshad Ayub, who edged a delivery into the safe hands of Viv Richards at first Vengsarkar, given a life in Marshall's first over of the day when wicketkeeper Jeff Dujon spilled a catch as he dived across first slip, batted 216 minutes and faced 153 balls.

His half century was his first of the series and only his third in 16 Test innings in the Caribbean. On Wednesday, Richie Richardson fell one short of a 10th Test hundred when Kapil Dev bowled him for 99 before West Indies were all out for 266 in their second innings. They had resumed at 199 for seven.

Richardson, 77 overnight became over-anxious for his hundred and, moving across his stumps, was bowled middle and leg by Kapil Dev. He batted for 352 minutes, faced 277 balls and hit only four boundaries.

His run tally for the series is now 466 for five innings to follow the 502 runs he scored in the series in Australia. Courtney Walsh was the last West Indian out when Kapil yorked him to finish with five for English cricket season starts

LONDON, April 21, (Reuter): Graham Dilley and Ian Botham bounced back from surgery to give champions Worcestershire - and England — a splendid boost at the start of the county cricket season yesterday.

Fast bowler Dilley, who underwent a knee operation last autumn, provided early evidence of his fitness with a five-wicket haul against Nottinghamshire.

All-rounder Botham, out for most of last season with back trouble, also served notice of his Test ambitions by coaxing him-self through 16 overs of controlled swing bowling. He took two for 37.

Ted Dexter, the new chairman of selectors, could hardly have had more encouraging reports on two of his key candidates for the forthcoming series against the visiting Australians. Dilley dismissed England openers Tim Robinson and Chris Broad in his five for 42 return, though Nottinghamshire reached 218 thanks to 73 not out by Derek Randall. West Indian paceman Win-ston Davis took four for 43 and fellow seamer Greg Thomas marked his debut with three for 53 as Northamptonshire dismissed Derbyshire for 183.

Australian captain likes Ashes 'underdog' tag

BRISBANE, Australia, April 21, (Reuter): Australian cricket captain Allan Border is happy with the "underdog" tag given to his Ashes side which leaves for England on April 29.

"I've heard all the reports about us having no chance," Border said today. "That suits us. We are quietly confident that we have the side, although we have a lot of work to do."

Border said in a radio interview he was looking forward to again doing battle with England skipper David Gower. "I thought they might have decided to go with Mike Gatting as captain, although I always thought David Gower was very unlucky to lose the job in the first place," he said.

Border said other Queensland members of the Australian 17-man squad have been keeping fit and in form since the end of the domestic

"Carl Rackemann is bowling magnificently as is Trevor Hohns," Border said. "Ian Healy is in top form too," he added. Healy is the side's first choice wicketkeeper.

New South Wales paceman Geoff Lawson who made England tours in 1981 and 1985 is also confident that Australia will bring back the Ashes after this northern summer's six-Test series.

"We have the edge on the opposition in the bowling department with a better strike attack," he said. "The weather will dictate the wickets we get in England but by and large the seam and swing bowlers hold the key to the Ashes," he said.

Lawson said he has fully recovered from the jaw-shattering blow he received in the second Test against the West Indies in Perth last year. "I'm feeling on top of the world, never fitter, no jaw problems and I haven't had any trouble from my old back condition for two seasons

April 21, (Reuter): Former Wimbledon champion Pat Cash is likely to be out of tennis for six months after an operation on his ruptured Achilles tendon today, Cash's physiotherapist David Zuker told journalists.

The 23-year-old Australian will spend six weeks in plaster. He is expected to be released from hospital in a few days.

Cash's injury, suffered during second-round match at the Japan Open on Wednesday, means he will miss the remaining three Grand Slam tournaments of 1989.

The Japan Open was only his second Grand Prix tournament in eight months after a leg injury and disillusionment led to a long lay-off in the second half of 1988. A statement issued by Cash's father, Pat Senior, said: "Pat is looking forward to making a speedy recovery and returning to tennis.
